

Geography of historical roads in Georgia

Annotation

Luka Davitashvili

luka.davitashvili8512@ens.su.edu.ge

Department of Geography Faculty of Exact and Natural Sciences

Ivane Javakhishvili Tbilisi State University 0179, Tbilisi, I. Chavchavadze Ave. 1,

The relevance of the master's thesis is related to the geographical features of historical roads. In this regard, this issue has not been studied so far, which was done according to the thesis. To connect with each other. An in-depth study of the issue will become a precondition for better interconnection of regions and their economic development. It is also possible to increase Georgia's transit role and use its geographical location. The aims and objectives of the paper are related to the urgency of the topic. Among the aims of the research are: to study the history of historical roads in the world and in Georgia and to reveal their significance; Identifying the geographical features of historical roads in the world and in Georgia; The study of the perspectives of restoration of historical roads will be carried out for the first time as a result of the research: study of international, regional and local roads in Georgia and revealing their geographical features; Discussing historical roads in a geopolitical context; Studying the prospects of their restoration, which can become a prerequisite for the development of this or that region of the country and the implementation of infrastructure projects